Mark has over 25 years' experience in the industry with the last ten being spent in dispute avoidance and resolution. Having trained in private practice, he has also gained experience in contracting as well as consultancy.

Since entering into consultancy, Mark has gained extensive experience across a number of sectors including building and infrastructure, acting for clients, main contractors and subcontractors.

He has worked on a number of expert quantum commissions in both the English and Scottish courts which have involved the measurement and pricing of variations, the estimating of construction costs from first principals and detailed assessment of final account submissions and claims for the rectification of remedial work.

Mark has been appointed to provide expert support in litigation and adjudication proceedings and has provided verbal testimony at adjudication hearings.

He has also provided extensive quantum expert assistance on a number of large scale claims, including international rail systems, bridge construction, water main replacement and cladding defects.

Mark has been appointed quantum expert in the High Court (Queens Bench) in London on a matter relating to defective stone on a housing development.
